HONGKONG, NOVEMBER 3RD, 1875.

WHILE Memorials and Decrees are being published in the Peking Gazette, enjoining on all cofficials in China the necessity of observing the stipulations of the Treaties with regard to foreigners; the mandarins of Nanking are coolly allowing them to be our European friends at Tientsin, however, ignored by the populace of that city. One of those periodical outbursts of senseless and causeless enmity to the foreigners, with which all British residents in China are so familiar. has recently occurred in the southern capital. As in most, if not all, other cases of the kind, this exhibition of ill-feeling seems to have been artificially engendered, either by the lower officials or the literati, a class whose animosity to foreigners appears sleepless and unappeasable. How it originated seems involved in some little obscurity, but there is every reason to believe that the American missionaries, against whom was directed, were not to blame any way. They had only just arrived, and had not offended any Chinese prejudices. > TEETOTALISM IN THE ARMY IN INDIA.

It must be very gratifying to the honorary secretary, the Rev. J. G. Gregson, to have it in his power to publish an favourable a report of the progress of the Soldiers' Total Abstinence Association in India, as the one he has been enabled to put forth for the past year. What, perhaps, is most pleasing in the report is the interest taken and the response made to the pleadings of the Association, by the British soldier bimself. It is not so very long ago that the British soldier in India commenced his daily task with a tot of grog. The authorities did not positively order him to drink it, but it was provided for him. And the soldier of those days was as willing to please the authorities he be is in the present day, and as he always will be. It was to the seamen of the Royal Navy that the famous signal "England expects that every man this day will do his duty" was addressed The soldier is, we hope, with his comrade the royal seaman always ready to do his duty. This, we think, the Report under review clearly establishes. The Association has met with approval and substantial support, as may be plainly seen on reference to its pages, from those highest in authority in this land; and so, indirectly, the soldier is now provided, by sanction of the authorities, with tea and coffe in place of rum, and we see from the statistics given, that he is by no means backward in responding to the invitation. It is not to be expected that the whole of the 58,000 British troops serving in India will at once forsake or shake off the habit of partaking of rum to which many have been acquistomed for years; but we are convinced that year by year the consumption of rum will decrease amongst our European army. The annual return shows the number of total abstainers in April last to have been 6,242-more than one-tenth of the British Army serving in India. The writer of the report is desirous of parading this division of 5,000 men before the Commander-in-Chief. We would auggest that a portion of the money which will be devoted to defray the Prince of Wales's expenses might be devoted to assembling this division at the approaching Camp of Exercise for the en route for Linchin. One sailor had died on upon the auspicious occasion is obvious; but let bat, 5th Fusiliers and the 65th Regiment bave furnished statements given at pages 31-32 of the report. These statements clearly snow, if they are to be relied upon, and this we can he was compelled at last to " miserably destroy lave the advantage in many points of comparison over the non-abstainers. We would invite the particular attention of our readers to these statements. Drink, or rather drunkenness, is the crying evil of the British soldier, and many an otherwise good man has had to put in a certain amount to penal servitude, or perhaps less rigorous punishment, owing thereto. The Army includia is greatly indebted to Mr. Grege son for his unceasing efforts in behalf of the physical and moral well-being of the British soldier in India. And we were pleased to observe at a recent gathering of the community of Agra, the marked expression of their appreciation when he appeared in their midst. Civil

"LTHE AMERICANS IN THE SOUTE PACIFIC.

The Post remarks that while Fiji has for number of years been the object of attraction to many of our countrymen, as well as to a few Americans and Germans, another group in the South Seas, known as Samos, or the Navigator Islands, has been coveted by our transitiantic consins, anxious to extend in the South somewhat of that appremacy they already possess the North Pacific through the influence thev exercise over the Sandwich Islands, and which latter-group-they-consider it their "manifest destiny" some day to claim for their own altogether. That all the islands of the Pacific must eventually, sooner or later, come under white rule can acarcely be doubted. Mr. Voge the enterprising Minister of New Zealand. bis Polynesian trading scheme, shadowed fort -a twelvementh ago, but now lying temporarily n-abeyance, intended, by the inauguration of a general system of trading with the different groups, to prepare them for their being brought under British subjection; but i is by no means unlikely that the United States may in some cases be beforehand with us. In h hands, however, of those of our great commercial rivals, the inhabitants of the States, the sislands of the Pacific are assuredly destined to fail, and although in many respects the Fos would perfer to see the fing of this Empire wave over them when the appointed time comes for their being brought under white domination. yet it will be quite willing to welcome proximity to us the standard of that country which in race and language is so akin to our own. The advance of America in the Pacific whether directly affected by her Government or brought about by her enterprising citizens, is, unlike the advance of Russia in the East, a step in the spread of civilization which can cause us no dissatisfaction or anxiety, and it will certainly not be for England to exhibit any unfitting realousy if in her go-a-head career America sometimes cutstrips as in progress.

THE PROSPECTS OF FREE TRADE. The commercial treaties, to the number of fifty or sixty, which were concluded after the model of that between France and England in | kind of Bengal drug to-day, the quotations for 1860 are about to expire; and it will shortly be which, however, remain the same as last given. seen by the course taken by one European A few chests of Malwa, good drug, have been Government after another in dealing with them placed at $600, with a concession of ten tuels whether special interests have more power in in weight. determining the direction of legislation and policy than a regard for the welfare of the community at large. The cause of free trade abroad has to be maintained in a series of separate—conflicts, and under political and economic conditions greatly differing in different countries. According to the Cobden Club reports, in Austria, and in may of the States of the German Empire, the most strenuous efforts are being made by the Protectionists to procure the reversal of the policy on which the Commercial Treaties were founded. But in the opinion of the writer of the report on the Austro-Hungarian monarchy, the Government is not likely to permit the Protectionists to substitute the interests for those of the nation, while, as to any, Prince Bismarck is a convinced Free Tender, and so are his principal advisers in economic matters. The account given of Italy is of a very different character from the reports ! from Germany and Austria, for the present On Italian Government appears inclined to reintroduce the pernicions system of discriminating duties between the products of different countries. In the United States of America the question of free trade is very little discussed by the press, but the people are said to be fast learning in the school of experience. From Hongkong and Shanghai Bank Sharee. -9 Australia the reports are alike encouraging. COAL IN INDIA. The chief difficulty standing in the way of railway enterprise in India is the high price of fuel. Mr. Julian Dunvers estimates the average cost of coal on the Bombay lines at 58s. per ton, and on the Madras at 70s, per ton. On the other hand, the Hengal railways are supplied at considerably less than half these rates, owing to the active working of coul beds in that predency. Comparative experiments recently carried on by the acting locomotive superinten ... dent of the Madrae Railway with Australian, English, and Indian coals, gave the following results :- The average consumption per mile was in favour of the Australian, 27.35 lbs. of that sort having been consumed against 31.08 lbs. of Indian, and from 80 16 to 32 82 10s of English. But in respect to expense, the indigenous production had a great superiority, its cost per mile being four annus nine pie against five annus five pie for lustralian, and seven annas one piè for English This was at a time when Indian Tanhoné coni which comes from Bengal, was selling in Madras for 43s. a ton. Subsequently, however, arrangements were made by which the cost price was reduced to about 36s. a ton, and there was every expectation that a still greater reduction would ultimately become possible. As the East Indian and Eastern Bengal lines chiefly owe their financial success to the comparatively low price at which they are supplied with local fuel, the discovery of coal measures in other parts of Indian motificatly becomes of great importance. At present the Indian Government is sadly hampered in its desire to extend its railway system by the heavy charge to revenue annually entailed through the inability of many QUEEN FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY lines to pay the full amount of guaranteed inrerest. CRIME IN NEW YORK. The boldness with which burglars and robbers of all sorts have violated the laws in New York within the last few weeks has led to comparisons between the crime records of New York and London. The latter city, says the Philadelphia Ledger, has three times the popuation of New York, and four times as many policemen, but as New York is compacted son a small island, there are more policemen to the mile of patrol in New York than in London. Relatively, New York had a much worse criminal record than London as to all crimes, and had an absolutely worse record in burglaries and lurcenies These facts indicate a greater proportion of the criminal classes in the population of New York than in that of London, or else that, because of the absence of concentration of authority and responsibility in the police department of New fork—which is governed by a Commission instead of by a single chief-the criminal classes of New York feel themselves a great deal more free to commit their depredations with good obsuces of esoupe.

You know that the stones under your carriage wheels are the very same fine city; that the varandas from whence you are being overlooked are these from which homage was paid to great monarchs; that the life, rich or poor, is identically the same life in nearly all, if not all, leading characteristics, as that which existed here when the wolf and the wild boar held revol in Britain. Nothing indeed, either in Benares or Cairo (I take the most oriental cities I know) impresses one so much with a sense of orientalism as do these narrow streets of Agra.
